The prelude to the Grizzly-Bobcat basketball game Thursday evening in the Adams

Field House will feature a rennovated Montana freshman offense.

University of Montana freshman coach Jack McWhorter said his Cubs will employ a new faster moving offense when they host the star-studded Montana State Bobkittens Thursday.

"We seemed to get bogged down in the stack (the offense employed in the Cub's first four games) and I think new attack will give us more movement and versatility."

McWhorter's team dropped the first four games and will try to get on the winning track against the Bobkittens.

The Kittens have the height advantage in 6-11 Brent Wilson and 6-9 Doug Layne. Montana's tallest player is 6-7 Cris Anderson, Olympia, Wash.

Anderson is the Cubs leading scorer with an 87 point total in four games. He is also the leading Tip rebounder with 62.

McWhorter plans to vary his starting lineup. Blake Lyman, a 6-3 Missoula Sentinel product, will replace Mike Hubbard at a forward post. Lyman will join former Sentinel teammate Kevin Rocheleau on the first five.

Rocheleau is Montana's second leading scorer and the Cub playmaker. He has totalled 50 points for four contests.

McWhorter said the team attitude has changed 100 per cent with the implementation of the new offense. "The kids like movement and scoring. That's what we have now."

The Cubs-Bobkitten clash is slated for 6 p.m. Thursday. Some tickets are still available for the Grizzly-Bobcat game also.

The Cubs hit the road Saturday for a return clash with North Idaho J.C. in Couer d'Alene. North Idaho won the first meeting, 95-74.
